Who Really Cares

Its been a weird day. Yesterday Jim and I worked so hard for others. We were happy and blessed to do so. We work hard each day. With no monetary payment. We felt so good about our work. Then today, we are reminded how deranged peoples minds can be. We just shake our heads and ask ourselves how this can be normal? Its not normal behavior. It saddens our hearts. We ask God to help us, not to judge but to be prayerful for those people who treat us badly, expect the work to be done by us, while putting up with their bad behavior, take the bows for the work they did not do, and all the while knowing that we will not say a word to anyone. God sees everything and our reward I not on this earth, it is in heaven. No one waits to hear it anyways, they have their own problems and worries, and like us they are just trying to get by. The bad people referred to as jerks, have to get all they can on this earth, that is all they have. If we continue to pray for them, maybe they will be saved and then they will thank us for praying for them. Maybe they won't. But the only one that matters is God. He see's everything. He will judge our hearts harder then he will judge their actions against us. Because we know better.
