This is the first time that Diana and I were able to write a song to the Lord. She brought her keyboard and we prayed and thought about what we would like to write about. Diana suggested we write about bridges since Pastor Carroll's on going theme is gapping the bridge for the new year. As Diana and I write our song, we hope to focus on Gods Will, Gods Path, Gods direction.

The Church and the world greatly need saints who can bridge this wide gap between the praying done and the small number of answers received. Saints are needed whose faith is bold enough and sufficiently far-reaching to put God to the test. The cry comes even now out of heaven to the people of the present-day Church, as it sounded forth in the days of Malachi: "Prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts." God is waiting to be put to the test by His people in prayer. He delights in being put to the test on His promises. It is His highest pleasure to answer prayer, to prove the reliability of His promises. Nothing worthy of God nor of great value to men will be accomplished till this is done.
